

MICROBIOLOGIE, INFECTIOLOGIE ET IMMUNOLOGIE

CONFÉRENCE

Dr Mohammad Ali Jenabian

Postdoctoral Fellow

Department of Medicine, McGill University Health Centre

Host immunosuppressive mechanisms: Implication for HIV pathogenesis

Several immunosuppressive mechanisms and cell types, including regulatory T-cells (Tregs) are involved in self-tolerance as well as the control of various autoimmune diseases. However, Tregs are also involved in the pathogenesis of cancer and chronic viral infections. The controversial role of Tregs in HIV pathogenesis and the latest findings in this area will be discussed during this conference.

Jeudi 5 décembre 2013 à 11h30
Pavillon Claire McNicoll, salle Z-255

Invité par Dr Hugo Soudeyns
Tél: (514) 343-6285
Courriel: hugo.soudeyns@umontreal.ca